THE LEGION OF HONOR.

Founded in 1802 by the First Napoleon as a Means of Rewarding Merit.

The first decorations of the Legion of Honor, the famous French order of merit, were conferred in 1802 upon military and civil officers who had distinguished themselves under the consulate. The order was founded May 19, 1802, by Napoleon, when he was first consul. It consists of several grades, as grand crosses, grand officers, commanding officers and legionaries, and was a reward for services of merit. The order was conferred by Louis XVIII, when the Bourbons were returned to the throne a century ago, and it has been continued, with necessary changes in the constitution, through the reigns of Charles X, Louis Philippe, Napoleon III, and the second and third republics. Many Americans and British subjects and other foreigners have received the decorations of the Legion of Honor.

FEAR OF LIGHTNING.

It is Natural to Man Yet is Largely Baseless.
It is hopeless to try to quiet human fears of the thunderstorms by statistics showing that lightning kills fewer persons than measles or motorcars. Lichtenberg, the eighteenth century physicist, who was a satirist as well as a specialist on electricity, wrote in vain his article on "Fear of Lightning." At that moment there was dysentery in Göttingen, and six persons were said to have died—"more than twice as many in a few days as lightning has killed in our town in more than half a century, and yet the public seem remarkably easy on the subject." How different it would be, Lichtenberg reflected, "if the dysentery rose above the horizon in the form of a big black cloud, changing day into twilight, and whenever it selected a victim exploded with a violent thunderclap."

POLISH FREEDOM.

Last Remnant Went Under Austrian Control in 1846.
It is seldom remembered that one fragment of independent Poland survived long after the partitions of the eighteenth century. In 1815 the powers agreed that the town of Cracow, with its territory, should be forever a free, independent and strictly neutral city, under the protection of Russia, Austria and Prussia. But in the forties came the Polish Insurrections, and Austrian troops occupied Cracow. Metternich accepted the Czar's suggestion that Austria should stick to it, being influenced by the fear that Russia or Prussia would have it if Austria did not. So, in 1846, perished the last remnant of "free" Poland, just ten years after Peel has expressed to Gladstone his belief that they would live to see Polish independence restored.

Poker Kills a Whale.

The crew of the oil steamer California were happy on reaching port because they had captured a whale and found ambergris worth $1000.
A school of playful whales followed the vessel up the coast, and having nothing else to do the crew tried to capture one bull in the wake of the ship. There was no harpoon aboard, so they fashioned one out of a stoker's poker that resembled a crowbar. After many attempts they landed a whale by harpooning from the stern. When the carcass was hauled aboard the sight of ambergris almost caused a fight as to division of the spoils.

HOW FAR BACK CAN YOU GO?

Here's Man Recalls Trivial Thing Happening When He Was Three Years Old.

"I have found in my investigations," said one interested in the study of psychological phenomena, "that for a man to recall incidents in his life when he was four years old is the average limit of memory, although I have met persons who claim to be able to remember events in their lives as far back as when they were two years old. I know that I have a vivid recollection of several things that must have occurred when I was not yet three, for the printed record of events that were contemporary with that time prove it by association.

"One of these trivial things that I recall was the reference of a kindly old lady to my first pair of boots, which had red tops, a fashion brought in by a certain class of men who were laborers on a railroad which was in course of construction a few miles away.

"You look just like one of the railroaders working up yonder along the river," said she to me.

"And I can remember the quizzical look on her face as plainly as I saw it that day 67 years ago. I was not yet three years old, and just then was the time the railroaders were working up along the river.

"But the memory that recalls events earlier than the four-year-old period of life is rare; in fact, it is phenomenal."

MATTER OF CASTE FEELING

Real Reason for Custom of Indians and Asiatics Traveling Always in Single File.

When the Indians traveled together they seldom walked or rode two or more abreast, but followed one another in single file. It has been thought by some that this practice resulted from the lack of roads, which compelled them to make their way through woods by paths.

If this were the real reason for the practice, then we should expect to find that the tribes who lived in open country traveled in company, as do whites.

The true reason for journeying, as the Indians did, in single file, seems to be a feeling of caste. This feeling was at the bottom of other customs of the Indians.

This peculiarity is Asiatic. How it has warped and disfigured Hindu life is well known. Home is scarcely possible where it prevails. To the women and children domestic life is bondage. The women of a Chinese household are seldom seen on the street. The children, when accompanying their father, follow him at a respectful distance in single file, and in the order of their ages.

Superstitious Royalty.

The Hanoverian kings were not altogether free from superstition. But in their day it was at the courts of certain European monarchs, and notably the court of France, that superstitious beliefs and practices prevailed. As late as the eve of the French revolution King Louis XVI and his queen, the unfortunate Marie Antoinette, dabbled with the old outworn faith in sorcery, astrology and alchemy; as is evidenced, for example, by the favor enjoyed by the celebrated charlatans Mesmer and Magliostro. More interesting than either of these, though not nearly so well known today, was an impostor who flourished a few years earlier, the so-called Count de St. Germain, favorite of Louis XV and Madame de Pompadour, and famed through all Paris as the one man in history who had really discovered the elixir of life.

Understood That Better.

Marie Caslova, the violinist, used to tell of a reception at which she was to be the soloist, which was given by a woman whose sudden wealth had not brought her musical knowledge. "When I called her up five hours before the reception to ask about the condition of the piano, she exclaimed: 'I sent the piano back to the factory last week for repairs. Can't you play something without one?' The only things I had at my finger's ends for violin alone were some Bach sonatas. This gave me an inspiration. 'Certainly,' I answered, 'I can play the Chaconne.' After a moment's silence a disappointed voice replied: 'But, my dear, I would so much rather you played the violin.'"
